

Businesses in Crisis: Learning from Good and Bad Management Decisions

Organizations in the 21st century continue to learn from business failures that were the result of bad managerial decision-making, unethical business decisions, and/or dysfunctional business models. It is critical for leaders to understand the nature of the problems caused by bad business decisions that can produce disastrous results and ultimately lead to business failures. This book outlines various situations of organizations in crisis and the tools management needs to recover from such situations. This book discusses functions of management that are critical to the success of an organization. In addition, examples are provided throughout the book of businesses in crisis and how we can learn from their good and bad management decisions.
