The value of having trained men in the service of the Department can not be too highly estimated. The next region of the State to be inspected was to the south and east of South Mountain. From the city of Lancaster three trips were made by trolley, first to Ephrata, second to Quarryville, and the third to Gap. At each of these places the blight was found. Specimens of bark were taken from trees six and eight inches in diameter. Infected sprouts or coppice about stumps were obtained. Under the microscope spores of the deadly fungus in uncountable millions were shown. The disease was most prevalent at Gap. Ephrata in Lancaster is south of South Mountain and is only twelve miles from Wernersville in Berks county where the forests of South Mountain furnished no evidence of the disease. At Gap, Mr. Lem Wise has a chestnut grove of one hundred trees, consisting of Paragon and Spanish grafts. A distinction is made between a chestnut grove and a chestnut orchard. When the stock is a native chestnut and the scion for grafting is a foreign variety or Species, such as Paragon, Spanish, Japanese, Numbo, Ilidgely, Alpha, etc., it is termed a grove. When young seedlings are set out in rows, whether grafted or not, it is called an orchard. The blight had invaded Mr. Wise's grove. Infected spots were found on the native stock and also on grafts. The following note was made at the time of the inspection: The Paragon and Spanish grafts are unusually healthy considering the number of infected native trees in the immediate vicinity. On these trips in Lancaster county it was my good fortune and very great pleasure to have the company of Deputy Commissioner of Forestry, Mr. Irvin C. Williams. It was decided at once to make an Experiment Station at Gap and to plant twenty nve Japanese chestnut trees and to start with one hundred grafts of the same species. Surrounded by natural woodland in which the disease is quite prevalent, here was an opportunity to test the immunity or resisting power of three foreign chestnut growths side by side.
