

THE RED PENCIL

As a child I have always wondered what happened to the previous owner of the estate in Poland we lived in for six years. As an adult, I researched the historical facts of World War II and their consequences. This story is the result of my quest. I have used some of the persons from my book: The burning Train, a biography of my life, since the story takes place in the same estate, at the same time. Otherwise, the names of the people in The Red Pencil are fictional; any resemblance to existing names is pure coincidence. Janka, the protagonist, is a Polish girl living on a country estate. Her happy childhood ended when the Germans invaded Poland. The Gestapo killed her father and brother. Her mother and sister were taken by the SS to a concentration camp, where her sister died. A German family moved into her parents estate. The family fled in the winter of 1945 to Germany with the Russians on their heels. To save Janka's life, one of the estate workers hid her in their hut during the German occupation. Her mother then returned to the estate. After the fall of the Third Reich, the Russians dominated Poland. Janka and her mother, being aristocrats, were accused of being enemies of the people and sent to jail. They were separated. Janka never knew what her mother's fate was. Jailed, Janka was raped and tortured. She fell in love with Boris, the commissar of the prison. He took her to his bungalow to live with him. When they were discovered, he was sentenced to hard labor. Pregnant, Janka was sent to one of the Russian Goulag camps. Her child died of malnutrition. Two years later Boris was sent to the same camp. They, together with a brigadier of the camp and another girl, planned to escape. Boris and the girl were killed. Janka and the brigadier made it to Afghanistan to start a new life.
