BONUS: Teaching Moment Ideas for Parents, Grandparents, and Teachers

Katonka, the Canadian Goose, Owes a Big Debt He Can Now Repay

During World War II, the military protecting the coasts of the United States relied heavily on the expertise of radio men stationed in outposts along the coast. Sarge and Rooney were two such radio men. In Katonka Flies North this gander is injured in a cruel turn of fate and separated from his flock. The human war was the cause of his injury, but also the key to his recovery when he met Sarge and Rooney. Now Katonka gets to pay back the debt he owes these two men in Katonka Pays a Debt. The plane Sarge and his team were flying across Canada to set up a new outpost to warn of incoming planes. But they run into engine trouble and crash in the water and must set up their outpost there and wait for winter to freeze the lake to allow the plane to take off again.
