

School Costs and School Accounting (Classic Reprint)

Excerpt from School Costs and School Accounting Whatever value is possessed by this dissertation comes from the kindness and courtesy of the superintendents of schools and from school accounting officers who so willingly made available the data in their possession concerning the cost of education in their school systems and the methods employed in accounting for school funds. Their number alone prevents acknowledgment being made to them individually. To them also must acknowledgment be made for permission to use copies of forms and records for purposes of illustration. To Professor George D. Strayer of Teachers College, Columbia University, the author is particularly obligated for guidance while making the investigation and for wise suggestions and criticism in the treatment of the data collected. The opportunities afforded by a year with the Training School for Public Service of the Bureau of Municipal Research, New York City, increased the worth of the constructive aspect of the study. Finally, to my wife should acknowledgment be made for aid in the detailed study of the data and for inspiration and suggestion in their treatment.
